ATEXANDRIA WEDNESDAY, OFFIRE 9

John Scott is elected the Delegate represent the Missouri Territory in the filteenth Congress; and Nathaniel Popular leads to the fifteenth Congress, from the territory of Illinois.

The following article from a Virginia paper, contains a very interesting, as well as afflicting group of objects, whose situation and misfortunes must forcibly impress the public feelings. We should hope exhibitions of this kind would not hope exhibitions of this kind would not be suffered to be often repeated in the metropolis of that state. Such miserable beings have a strong claim to something more than common humanity. How forcibly does the instance of the "Deaf and Damb" person here mentioned, speak in favour of the Institution in Connecticut.

Only the instruction of persons of that characteristics are instruction of persons of that characteristics. for the instruction of persons of that cha racter.

They tell me she goes about so, with these few clothes on, and sometimes having nothing to eat. It is a pity," whispered the boy. Yes, indeed, it is my little fellow and you don't know whose duty it is to take care of her?" "No, indeed; unless it is her master's; for they say she has one—but I suppose he has turned her away now she can be of no use to him. You know, sir, the story of the old hound whose teeth were worn out?" "Yes (said I) and I am afraid I remember another case, much better in point—the anecdote of the great Cate, who used to expose his slaves in a desolate island, afte: hey had been worn out in the service. "Yes, but (save the boy) perhaps it was the way in these times, or Cate would not have done it -- but it is not so with us Bir; is it? My father, I know, does not treat his old slaves in this manner, he feeds and clothes them, though they are helpless, and I am sure would do it, it they were as much out of their senses as this old woman. It is a shame, Sir to see this poor creature going about in this way." "Yes, (said I) my little fellow, it is so: What would a stranger say

But the list of wanderers was not yet at a close. This morning, while I was walking in one of the most frequented strets or Shockoe Hill, I was struck with the appearance of a small mulatto boy running after another, with a whip in his Trampling, in his wild career, hand, and amusing himself at his expense. All alike—the dead and dyin The little boy he was chasing was black, very small, and emaciated, and with no covering about him, but a sort of ragget dirty mantle, which hung from his should der and was open before—he too was deaf and dumb; he too was an ou casi— wandering over the streets, and indebt ed to charity for a morsel of bread. No one could tell me any thing satisfactory about him. " But what (muttered 1) would a stranger say to this?"

I was astonished, sir, that three such spectres as these should be suffered to aunt the streets of the metopolis-offending the humanity and taste of its chizens and strangers—Must our wiver and children be compelled to withe a such spectacles? Is there no way to stop them? Sir, I cast no censures—for I an acquainted with such matters-I know not whom to blame. But I entreat the proper authority of this corporation to make some provision for the wanderers and to shate so offensive a misance. Or else, what will strangers say to this ! What will they say to us ?

Another circumstance I feel myself irensitible.

her circumstance I leel myself in ly called upon to mention. On Sunday last, just before the temples of the Almighty were opened a crowd of negroes was assembled around a gig or chair, in one of the streets—before a blacksmith's door. I ascertained that the amiths were forging handcuffs for two or three small boys, who were to be confined to the back part of the carriage. The slaves untealingly exposed, had just been purchased—and their master was about proceeding on his journey—Perhaps sir, my mind was out of tune—but so were the countenances of the bystanders, at this inhuman exhibition on the Sabbath. What said I to myself would a unday last, just before the temples bath. What said I to myself would
